Suddenly, Gill heard a loud crash nearby. Turning around, she saw a small black bird lying on the ground. Bobbi the bird could not fly well. He had hit the ground loudly when he fell down. Gill went to help him up. She found out that Bobbi had no friends and was feeling lonely too. Gill and Bobbi became friends and started playing hide-and-seek together.

Soon, it was Bobbi's turn to hide. He was very excited. Gill stuck her head into a hole to look for Bobbi. After a while, she could not put her head out. Gill screamed in fear. Bobbi was horrified. Feeling worried, he rushed to get help. In his hurry, he started to flap his wings fast and flew far away.

Help finally arrived. Bobbi returned with some animals. Bobbi stood there watching while the other animals pulled Gill hard to get her head out of the hole. One day, a bear felt hungry. He went to the river looking for food. He stood by the river and saw a fish. He jumped onto the fish and caught it.

As the bear held the fish in his paw, he thought, "This fish is too small. I must catch a bigger fish!"

He let off the small fish. He swam to the middle of the river and scooped out the next fish. Again, he found that it was not big enough and threw it back into the river. An hour passed but the bear did not find any big fish. He began to feel tired and decided to give up.

"All the small fishes that I had caught could have made me full," the bear sighed.

There was once a big, white hen that had twelve chicks. They were very small and the hen took good care of them. She played with the chicks when the sun rose and kept them under her wings at night.

One sunny afternoon, the hen took her chicks down to a small stream. There were many small animals and plants near the stream. When they got there, the hen decided to take her chicks to the other side of the stream to look for some food. She saw a large stone jutting out of the water and jumped onto it. From there, she crossed the stream. Turning around, she realised that none of her chicks had followed her.

The hen flapped her wings and cried, "Come here, all of you! Jump onto this stone. You can then jump to the other side."

One at a time, the chicks flapped their wings and jumped onto the stone. However, the last chick remained behind. It was worried and anxious.

"Help me get over the stream, Mother!" the chick cried. Upon hearing that, the hen went back and carried the last chick on her back. Then, the hen flapped her wings and crossed the stream with the chick.
